

When a road is once built,

it is a strange thing how it collects traffic,

how every year as it goes on,

more and more people are found to walk thereon,

and others are raised up to repair and perpetuate it,

and keep it alive.

Robert Louis Stevenson

This college has been here for a long time—Some, maybe you, remember it as G.S.C.W., or G.N.I.C.

The name changes mean little; we travel along the same road. It may be stronger, more settled, with new buildings and different people, but you would remember it.

For whenever a good road is built, there will be people to use it, and there will be people to guide those who use it, and all of them will work together or alone, each in his own way, to keep it in good condition for those who will come after.

Your feet would remember this road if they have ever traveled it . . .

If you climbed the stone steps of Atkinson and looked down and out across front campus when the trees were spring-fresh or autumn-mellow, you would remember us.

When you came to know us you would see that the names and the clothes had changed, but the quick joy, and the wonder and the questions in young eyes—these you would remember.

And you would see around you those everlasting columns—and know that you had come back home.

Your feet will remember the road, . . . all of us have traveled here . . . this is the road that carries us from youth and dreams of knowledge to whatever lies ahead.

Dedication

Your manner is that of the eighteenth century-courtly, poised, debonair.

You might be a diplomat in gilt and glorious courts, handling life-and-death matters with unstudied finesse . . .

an officer in bright satin sash and silver sword, straight from heroic deeds, gallantly reassuring the ladies,

clicking your heels with precision . . .

a gentleman scholar at a draped table in a paneled library, everything forgot but this small leather-bound book in your hands, everything forgot but the never-dimmed joy of reading and study . . .

You might be, and indeed you are, all of these, diplomat, officer, gentleman scholar.

Wherever you are—in the office, in the classroom—
we know there will be grace and dignity of bearing, the patience and understanding of a man not afraid to be kind,
the power of a strong and dedicated will,
the sparkle of a lively wit,
the flash of a mind that shares much knowledge
with infectious delight,

—and endless charm!

The combination is rare. We are glad to have known it.

And we are happy to dedicate this work

of our minds and hearts,

The 1962 Spectrum, to you-

Campus

Student Life

These are our columns—
trademark of the Woman's College,
our strong and sturdy support.

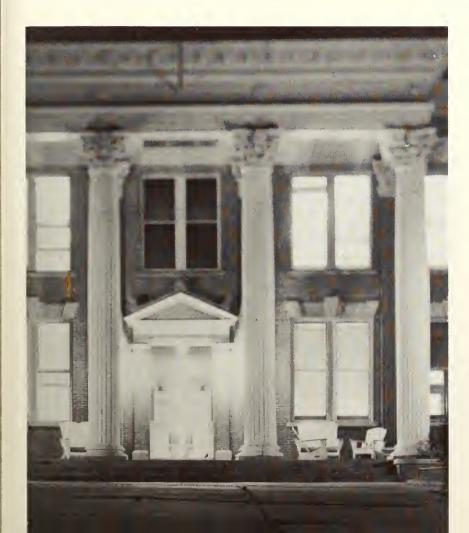

Most of them are Corinthian, thick and fluted, ornate with acanthus leaves, painted cream, and planted solidly on the porches of Terrell, our first home of Bell, next-door neighbor to Terrell, home of rows of friendly rocking chairs of Lanier, where they stand dark and familiar against the flood of bright indoor light in the night time, as we pass.

The columns are like the trees; they endure, and they stand straight.

They came in hordes, those noisy, worried, excited, hopeful creatures called freshmen . . . getting out of cars packed to the roof, greeted by advisors and student guides, cautiously following the signs stuck up around campus, getting acquainted with house mothers, roommates, too-small closets, and the campus dogs, welcomed by everybody, for the fresh ideas and personalities they brought along with them.

The end of every quarter means a bright new start—and registration for the next quarter.

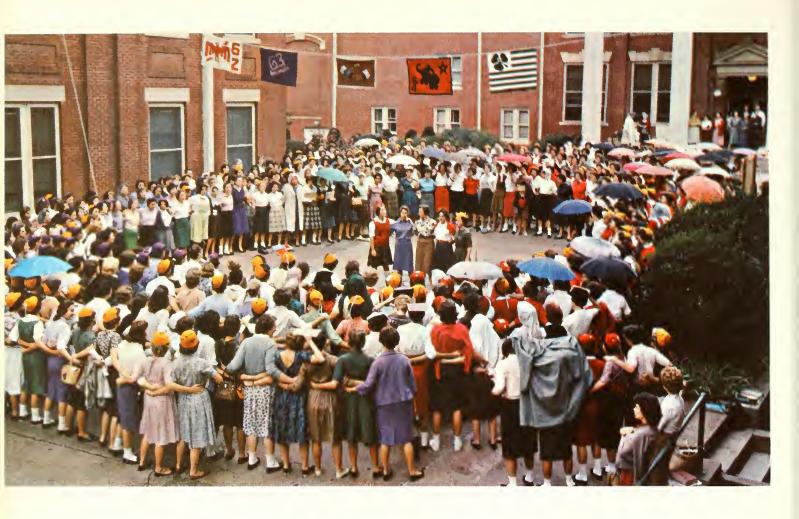

It means that we cut classes to be in line early, and it means minutes, sometimes hours, of standing in line or sitting on the library steps discussing schedule conflicts, degree requirements, and next quarter's teachers.

Then last-minute conferences with advisors, a rush to get into crowded classes, schedule cards to be filled out, and finally, a glow of triumph as we leave the library, having lived through it once more.

The life of a student is full of wonderful things—colors, sounds, smells, textures—We all remember . . .

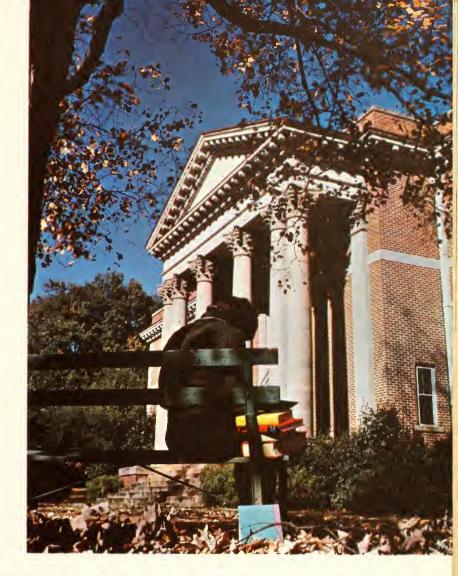

the color of leaves on front campus, crisp zing of an arrow leaving the bow.

the soft shadows thrown against library columns,

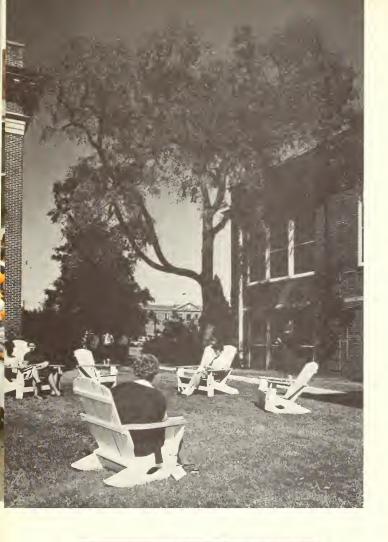

rustle of pages in the wind,
feel of books we love in our hands, realization that time passes in too much of a hurry
when we sit and read under a tree.

the brilliance of class colors at the flag-raising ceremony, thrill that comes with the slow ascent
of one special flag,
sweetness of coming together to sing,
exciting thoughts of The Night
coming soon.

the poised and tree-shaded elegance of Tea at the Mansion, graceful skirts in colors of summer,
rise and fall of voices in tea-time talk,
fragrance of tea-olive.

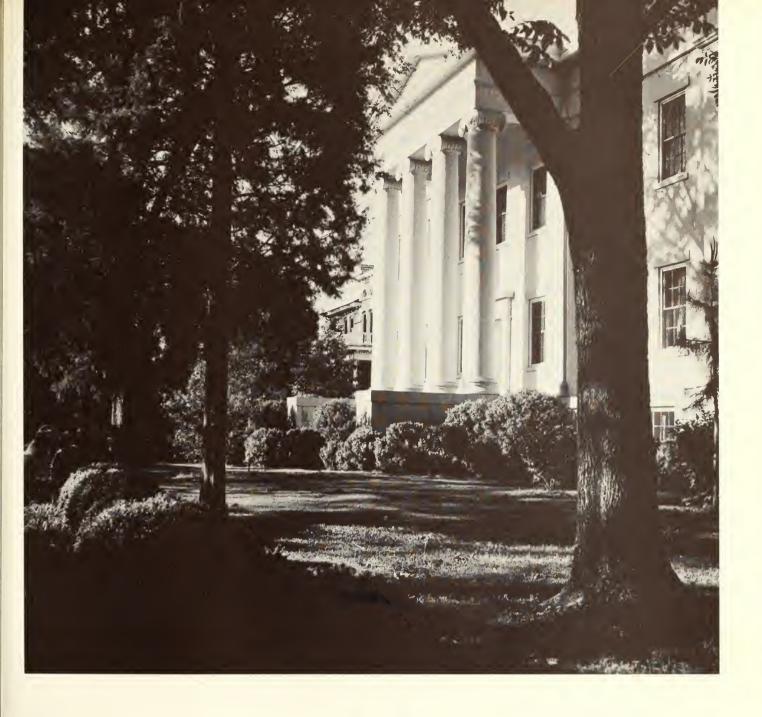

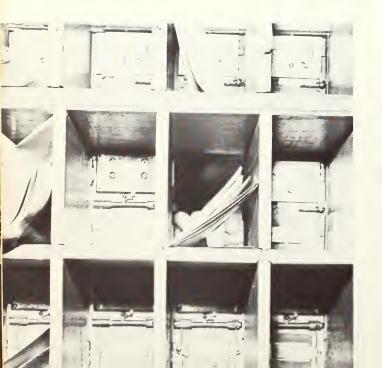

We bunch together outside Russell, and talk, talk, talk.

We go up the steps, past the columns, through the big doors.

We climb over other people, sit down, and wait, expectant, for what the next half-hour will bring.

Ah—a date! Be it big date, bad date or blind date, it's still a boy date and usually the occasion for much ado.

Room-mate sets the hair, Suite-mate lends a sweater and Girl-Across-the-Hall generously sprays her best Arpege.

Last minute adjustments are made while we wait for the hall phone to ring or to be fashionably late.

The fun we have with dancing or picnicking or just talking and the things we plan for next weekend make the long week to come seem just a little bit shorter.

Study is something we dread or something we enjoy—depending on the subject;
anyway, we do a lot of it.

Sometimes we study decorously, at a library table,
sitting up straight.

When we are in our rooms, we get a little more comfortable—(the strangest positions are the most comfortable—) and more comfortable still, as the evening wears away into the night.

Somehow we gravitate toward the horizontal and then our hold on the book loosens, our eyelids get heavier, the pillow gets softer, and the next thing we hear is the alarm clock at seven the next morning.

The morning hours are spent in class,
the afternoon, in study,
and finally with the sound of the six o'clock bell
we move enmasse toward the dining hall,
evacuating Lanier and Parks, ready for dinner, some relaxation and bridge and more study.

.. how ..., as it goes on ...

SENIORS

The Seniors rule this small universe,
they are the pace setters, the example-setters,
and the last word.

Yet their separate universes are widening and there are the years ahead to be planned for.
This small universe comes to seem not quite real,
and the Seniors look at the Freshmen
with half-amused, half-sad wonder,
and the Freshmen look at the Seniors
with half-awed, half-impatient wonder.
And so the world turns.

This is the half-way mark, and the year of decision.

It is a rather serious year, for now the way behind and the way ahead can be seen most clearly, and there are lessons to be learned from such vision.

At the end of this third year the Seniors relinquish the gavels of control to the upcoming class, which wonders how it could have happened so fast.

FRESHMAN CLASS

Freshmen, as are all bright and shiny-new things, are wonderful.

They came in the fall full of all sorts of hopes and plans, seeing the campus in a new light, just waiting for the chance to do things their way already setting a different stamp on things around here.

To the other classes they seemed very young— and very lucky, to have years ahead of them in which to make those plans come true.

College Government Association Believes in Government—of the student, for the student and by the student.

Here we bring our commendations and complaints, our ideas and suggestions. Here we are heard and here our representatives vote on policies and practices. Evaluation—of our experiences from which we learn and make better plans for the students who follow us.

We retain the best; try to improve upon that which is second best.

Standards—of honor and integrity; of high scholarship; of responsibility; of conduct and welfare; of citizenship and of the school we proudly call our own.

Honor Council

Ever working to make our honor code and our honor-way-of-life an ever more integral part of the education and development of every W. C. G. student; opening the school year with the solemnly impressive and meaningful acceptance of the honor code, leading us as we say "My honor is my own . . .," continuing throughout the year to guide us in mature, responsible and honorable living.

Judiciary

Interpreting for our personal use the policies by which we live, setting down the standards by which we choose to be governed; finding what is at fault when these standards are infracted; taking the responsibility of upholding ideals and guiding individuals to establishment of higher and worthier goals.

Young Women's Christian Association

Making itself felt in all areas of our lives, "Y" deals especially with the religious facet; giving us opportunity for service, opportunity for character development and guidance in self-discovery; placing special emphasis, through Religious Focus Week, one the question "What Is Real?" helping each of us to find our own answer;
providing through student-faculty coffees, a chance to know our professors better; providing through vespers and taps and chapel devotions a few moments from our busy day's set aside for worship; promoting in many ways the development of what is our best.

... and keep it alive."

Freshman Capping

The Capping of the Freshmen is a joyous occasion, an official welcoming of our new class
into the student body.

They gathered outside after dinner
and sat in the circle and sang class songs,
and that evening, after a performance in Russell,
caps were handed out,
symbols of class and school spirit.

High School Weekend

During the winter quarter there comes another lively occasion known as High School Guest Assembly, when swarms of high school seniors we've invited invade our dormitories and classrooms and dining halls. For one day and a night we show them the sights, take them to club meetings, class meetings, concerts, dorm parties and faculty interviews. They get to know the campus, and we get to know them, and we all have fun.

Annual

In the time of that yearly madness, the annual hike, on one sunny day in October, we came together on the long walk down front campus.

Class colors of green and purple and red and black moved together across the street, around three blocks, all the way to Bonner Park, a long hot walk, noisy with class songs.

The park was the scene of the first annual gridiron battle-to-the-death between faculty and seniors; there were several casualties, but somehow nobody seemed worried about it.

Faculty won, by some quirk of fate, and then came the serious business of eating . . . followed by a fire in the dusk, sentimental songs, a sympathetic guitar, and a magic spell around us all.

We walked home by two's and three's feeling tired and sad and happy all at once.

Hike

Golden

This was Slipper-unique, crazy, wonderful time.

Two weeks to be young in, to forget homework in, to glory in working together for one goal, to be silly and serious in . . .

and serious in . . . and most of all, it was a time for singing.

We conceived our themes, and planned our entrances, and worked feverishly, secretly . . .

secretly . . .
"Come and take a Spinning Spectrum journey," sang the freshmen and juniors;

"Extra! Extra! Read all about it!" sang the sophs and seniors.

In the rec halls, we took old scraps of lumber and strings and paint and lots of glue and made army trucks that ran and a Buddha, huge and gold and haughty.

Slipper

All the time, we sang . . . "Get Speedy Alka Seltzer when you think that you're about to die . . .'

"Lights of Paris all a-glitter, nights in Paris lots of fun . . ."

The song committees wept and swore and pleaded and sometimes they were pleased . . .

The props committees paced the floor over props that simply could not be finished in time to go across that stage . . .

but they were . . .

The entrance people sweated over the way we came onstage—"Put a little life into it, will you?"

The sponsors and general chairmen gave pep talks until they were hoarse and tired themselves . . .

We all went crazy. But we sang . . .

"A woman's world is just society . . ." "Down on Red Square . . ."

We just knew the backdrop would fall on its face, the Taj Mahal would come out in three separate pieces, the rocket wouldn't shoot up on cue, the Calcutta scene would still be wandering around when the African music started . . .

But when that first night came, things worked out pretty well. Some last-minute repairs and instructions, one last song session— "now or never"—and we waited for the last performance. It came: we acted and sang our hearts out; and when the decision was announced for the sophs and seniors we all sang together again, some crying, some laughing, still singing . . . "to strength renewed, with strife subdued, in purpose fused to stand."

Religious Focus Week

College is a place for wondering; it begins the search that never ends—"the search for what is real." For four years we sought to find the real; the search went on in ourselves all the time.

It was intensified and given direction during the week set aside in January as "Religious Focus Week."

Dr. William Mallard was guest speaker; he spent the week with us in chapel and classroom talks, Vespers, earnest informal discussions in the Y apartment, and personal conferences.

The theme around which all the activity was planned: "The Search for What is Real."

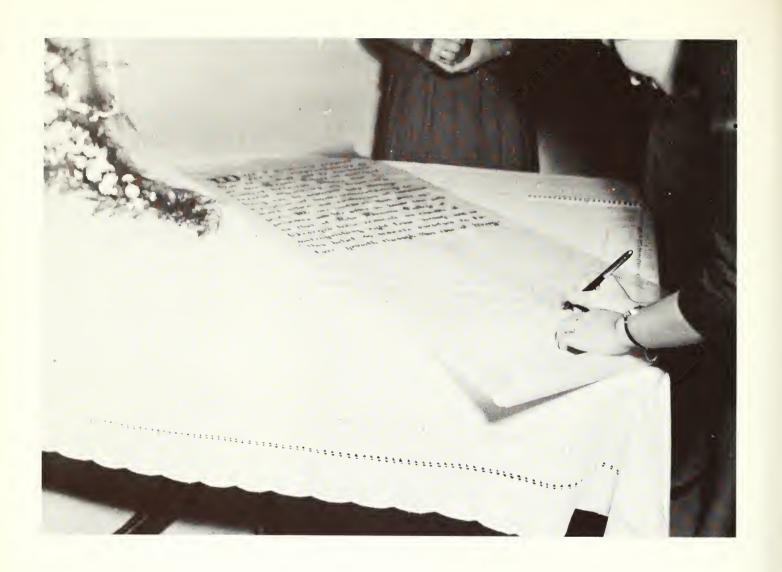

The week passed in a hurry, leaving some old questions unanswered, some on the way to being answered, some new questions brought to surface—and the search continued.

Convocation

Convocation is something we take seriously;
Miss Maggie plays the organ,
the faculty marches down the aisles,
impressive in multi-colored satin,
and then come the Seniors, for the first time black-capped and gowned.
Dr. H. K. Sanford, a past president of the College, spoke to us this year, and the College Choir sang,
and all of us felt a special closeness at this,
the official dedication of a new year.

Senior Code

It is a tradition at the Woman's College for the senior class to draw up the list of rules by which they shall be governed.

It is a symbol of trust; the pinnacle of self-government on campus.

It is something to be worked on for weeks, and after endless argument and discussion of moral standards and responsibility clarification,

It is something to be signed.

In a formal ceremony, in formal clothes and manners, the senior class gathers.

One by one they set their names, their seal of honor, to the document they will live by for the next, the last, college year.

HMS Pinafore

In the spring College and Theatre and the music department collaborated in an ambitious performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's HMS Pinafore. It was a gay and colorful night; the performers seemed to enjoy it as much as the audience did.

The stage, decked out in banners and ropes and other nautical effects, was alive with white-uniformed sailors and wide-skirted young ladies, all singing of their loves and their misfortunes.

College

The theatre group, under direction of Mr. Hart, gave its fall performance of "Mr. Pottinger," a lively comic mystery about an unorthodox nursing home, the mysterious Mr. P., and a couple of gin-guzzling old ladies. We remember Harriet Ann Sanders, the complacent cousin, looking on while Deby Weinstein struggled fiercely with the maid Biscuit, played by Sharon Dean . . . Miss Sanders again, talking to the pious Mrs. Charlesworth (Mary Simons), as Kay Hussey perches on the desk, triumphantly waving aloft a bottle she just discovered in the greenhouse.

Theater

The winter production, a one-act shocker entitled "The Choir," gave us some memorable scenes . . . the church choir acting out their thoughts during the sermon—Harriet Sanders looking righteous as she considers running off with the choir director, Chan Minter joyously exclaiming over the smell of fresh bread as it wafts past, Cindy Bender throwing up her hands in exasperation when the boy behind kicks her chair again . . . the choir, excepting Becky Evans, who is so in L-O-V-E, clapping rhythmically to the tune of "St Louis Blues" while Miss Sanders does a swinging version of the Twist with the choir director. Notice the halos laid beside the chairs, to be resumed after the sermon is over.

Spring Formal

A dance . . .

long hours of discussing themes,
making decorations,
and transforming the gym
into a thing of beauty
and a joy for one night;
waiting, waiting—until finally we know he can come,
searching frantically for just the right
dress and shoes that are danceablein but still elegant; positively floating down the dormitory stars to the floor, finding the look in his eye just what we hoped it would be,

dancing and dancing and dancing, we could have danced all night, like the girl in the song.

Winter Formal

The gym magically becomes something far removed from basketball and fundamentals exercises.

It has become a twilight-lit ballroom, and all our dates look like the escorts in Harper's Bazaar, and we wish the music would never stop.

In the Spring we danced to Dean Hudson's music; in the Winter to Billy Butterfield's; both times we were Cinderellas, and we could have sworn the shoes we wore had turned into glass slippers.

Chicago Opera Ballet

In February we stood around the front of Lanier and watched as the big trucks backed up to the porch and the men carried large wicker trunks and wardrobe cases and backdrop pieces, all marked "Ruth Page Chicago Opera Ballet" into the building. That night, on the stage of Russell they gave the dramatic story of "Camille," a short comic dance version of "The Merry Widow."

We were overwhelmed with bright costumes in satins and velvets,

the quick grace of lithe bodies,

the flashing of legs, legs, legs in time to music, and we came away dazzled by the wonder of dance.

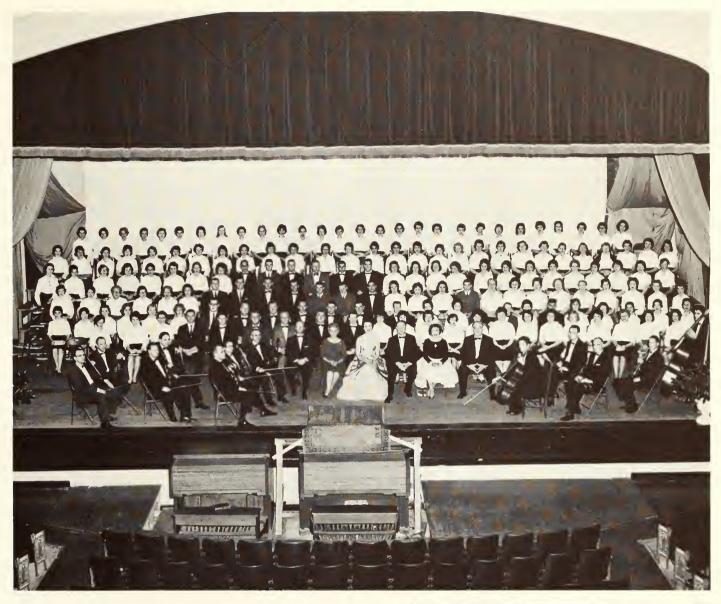

Atlanta Symphony

Henry Sopkin's Atlanta Symphony visits us every year during winter quarter. This year they gave a children's concert in the afternoon and we stood in the back and listened to "Peter and the Wolf" with as much delight as the grammar-school audience.

At night we attended the regular concert, and the familiar but ever-new swell of sound made us forget everything but the hushed, dark auditorium, the bright glittering stage and black-coated figures—and the shimmering music.

Concert nights are always exciting; they mean white gloves and perfume, a stage brilliant with color and alive with sound, hands sore from clapping and a concert program to store away in the desk drawer along with some memories . . .

The "Messiah" comes to us every year at Christmas-time, and crowds the stage with some two hundred performers—the chorus composed of people from GMC, Milledgeville, and our own college, the soloists drawn from all over the state, to be accompanied by Miss Jenkins at the organ and twelve players from the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra—all to be directed by Dr. Noah, in a spirited performance of the Christmas classic.

JEROME HINES, basso of the Metropolitan Opera, appeared here in October, to fill Russell Auditorium with a stunning voice in selections from Wagner, Beethoven, and Schubert. The audience kept clapping, and Mr. Hines responded with more encores, until he sent us home, content and rapturous, with a sweetly beautiful "Danny Boy."

Dear Sally, Hi then! You good-looking, devastating, soon - to - be sophomore. Looking back, I realize what a really great year we have had. We've had loads of fun and hours of stucky, J. P. STEVENS AND COMPANY, INC. which I know you will well remember. Our prendships Woolen and Worsted Division has meant much to me this year, and I hope that MILLEDGEVILLE PLANT Melt year, whether I live in Beeson or Bell, this griend-Milledgeville, Georgia ship will grow. In my opinion, you are about the "best all round" girl that I could have met at any college anywhere I sincerty hope that you will reach all of your yoals in life and always be happy. I hope you under"Fine Fabrics Made In América Since 1813." stand what I mean-I'm at a loss you words. as J.K. said, "my address is on page 200," but it is not -- mine is on page 196. I hope that you will write me this summer but don't let it keep you from haveng a wondeyel time. Our thanks . . .

Have you an idea of what goes into the making of a book?

It takes a lot of planning and patience and work and also a generous portion of love, most particularly for this book, your 1962 Spectrum. For love for this book and for you is what held tempers and bound jangling nerves when no amount of paper clips or staples or glue could help.

When dreams of perfection changed to nightmares of deadlines you were the motivation that made us work rather than give up and cry as we often wanted to do.

ent sting.

We hope that you'll find in this book some special memory. If you do our work has been worthwhile and rewarding.

The many ways in which you, the students, the faculty, our wonderful, hard-working staff, have helped us are appreciated.

We want to say our warmest, most sincere thanks also to Mr. Ware and Dave and John: to Foote and Davies and "our" Mr. Young; to Eberhardts, to Mrs. Sibilsky, to Mr. Cheek and Miss Jenkins for the use of your picture files and especially to Miss Quillian White, our staff advisor, to Dr. Joseph Specht, our business advisor, to Mr. George Gaines, our art advisor. Your ideas and advice and, even more, your moral support have been invaluable!

To each of you, with a great feeling of pride and probably a greater one of relief, we present this book.
